

Slow Down

Paulson

I learned to breathe underwater. when i turned nine i had to learn how to save myself I'm still alive

How does it feel to be 20 or 25?
well i can hardly remember, I just survive so when we met i was startled, I finally awoke blew out a breath full of water now that I'm not alone I got a taste of the surface; I can't let it go I used to sink but now I float slow down, stop rushing this It feels like nothing else matters now

love and lust can co-exist, so let's take our time (let's take our time, let's take our time)

You said "the days are getting shorter" and you were right 'Cause all the stars were appearing; they multiplied and so the more we surrendered the farther we fell It was either you or the moment, or both that I held As we descended on each other it got harder to tell and now I can't control myself

slow down, stop rushing this
It feels like nothing else matters now
love and lust can co-exist, so let's take our time

slow down, stop rushing this
It feels like nothing else matters now
love and lust can co-exist, so let's take our time

Hearts that race and breathe that stains covers ours to wear So when we wake up underwater i'll be here

slow down, stop rushing this
It feels like nothing else matters now

love and lust can co-exist,so let's take our time

slow down, stop rushing this

It feels like nothing else matters now

love and lust can co-exist,so let's take our time

(let's take our time,let's take our time)

Lyrics submitted by alex.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>