

Scientific Truth

qanda

As he looked into the mirror, Jonah Blackburn bared his teeth
In a hunter green pea jacket, he took off walking down the street
Strained his neck to see the fireworks
Exploding scent of trampled grass
By the witches tricking ponies juggling goldfish in a glass I can, I will, toss the old views overboard
Stretched out my mind like I've never done before
Pursued this course, now there's no discussion due
You heal my soul. That's the scientific truth Well, I left her in her castle in the morning mists of dawn
Walking dreams of fading moments
Running streams of salt and blood
I could see her eyes were burning as the words rolled off my tongue
We live yesterday forever and tomorrow only once I can, I will, toss the old views overboard
Stretched out my mind like I've never done before
Pursued this course, now there's no discussion due
You heal my soul. That's the scientific truth You shouldn't be afraid of me
I'm a piece of scorched rose
There are vast turbulent forces in this gleaming glacial show
So let's watch in fascination 'cause the giants are all dead
The land is crumpling into ridges, a single super continent
A single supercontinent I can, I will, toss the old views overboard
Stretched out my mind like I've never done before
Pursued this course, now there's no discussion due
You heal my soul. That's the scientific truth
