

Earth Gently Rolls

Abbott Hayes

The body of water that swallowed me whole
The wave that came rolling and swept me from shore
    The feeling of floating forevermore
    I pick my brain apart until it's sore
    I keep myself in tune with love and war
I try to choose between truth and loreTo try and strike a chord that rings
    And it rakes my mind and stirs up all these things
    And the dust flies into the air like it has wings
I awake to find that I'm feeling as clean as springThe lengthening shadow that's tied to my soles
    The grey on the ground that grows and grows
    The feeling of peace while the earth gently rolls
    Most thoughts in my brain i've never told
    I can't help my frozen heart from being cold
The weather is getting warm but I'm feeling oldTo try and see the truth that you claim you found
    Well I want a piece and I'll dig deep into the ground
    And I'll stay inspired as I get further and further down and I won't grow tired if this planet keeps spinning 'round
