

Drifting Further Away

Powderfinger

Don't go too deep into the flood
Don't stare too long, you'll poison my love Don't shut me out, don't hold it all in Don't let my venom get under your skin 'Cause every word and every turn
And every sign points to your hurt
With every hour you're drifting further away Come make your peace, come find your way
Come lay your wreath at the alter of change
Don't lose your step, don't break the bones
Don't shoulder your burden out there on your own 'Cause every word and every turn
and every sign points to your hurt
With every hour you're drifting further away Don't banish me then bid me home
Don't tell me where I came undone
And harbor love like it's all your own Don't linger over what you've done Don't sink underneath the weight of
When you're trying to carry way too much And you never should have let go
You could have joined in the whole show
I never should have let go
I never should have let go 'Cause every word and every turn
Every sign points to your hurt
With every hour your drifting further away And you never should have let go
You could have joined in the whole show
I never should have let go
I never should have let go

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>