

Third Engine

Saves the Day

The sky grows bigger every day
And the other week I hopped on a train
    Cutting through state lines
    To come to you as the crow flies
Out there in there offing everything was melon and orange
Did you know, my sweet
Yeah, that I once took the liberty of watching you in your sleep?
And I just want you to know
    That every pool of water reminds me of you
    Is that all right?
    I hope you think it's cool
Yeah, sometimes a train can't go as fast as I want it to
Did you know, my sweet
Yeah, that I once took the liberty of watching you in your sleep?
    I rolled over and over
    Trying to touch your knees, yeah, underneath the sheets
    Trying to touch your knees
    Everything seemed a little easier
    When we weren't one hundred miles apart
    The person across from me
    Sitting in her train seat
    Reminded me of you
    And I looked out past her cheeks
    Through the glass-light conduit
    The sun had sunk
    Disappeared into New Jersey
Oh, why don't they have phones on these things?
What can I do?
    I'm still thinking about you
    Did you know, my sweet
Yeah, that I once took the liberty of watching you in your sleep?
    I rolled over and over
    Trying to touch your knees, yeah, underneath the sheets
    Trying to touch your knees

Lyrics provided by
<https://damlyrics.com/>