All Will Be Forgotten

Holly Brook

Sittin' here I'm dwellin' on the things that I keep holding on to yesterday
Ties are broken, ties are made, I try so hard to find my way
Around this crazy place
Nobody seems to understand me, till you came along and told me this
All will be forgotten, every tear you've cried
As soon as you awaken
To what's right in front of your eyes
Standing by your side
Sittin' here I'm thinkin' 'bout the weather and the countryside around me Simple little things like these are good to keep My silly mind from wondering
I feel this summer breeze wash over me
Oh, I know the laughter, know the love, maybe I've just got enough to give
All will be forgotten, every tear you've cried

As soon as you awaken
To what's right in front of your eyes
Standing by your side
The road is long before me now
The memories beg me to stay
But lonely is born, from pride I've found
So I'll reach out
All will be forgotten, every tear you've cried
As soon as you awaken
To what's right in front of your eyes
Standing by your side
Sittin' here I'm dwellin' on the things that I keep holding on to yesterday

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/