Rainbow Girls

Rainbow Girls â€œYubaâ€•

Bones are patient

They never tire or run away

Keep us steadfast from the core, like they did on their first day

The flesh is fluid, no it wonâ€™t stand still.

Tell me in order to live forever, would you give up your free will?

Will you trust the water or the stone? Will you trust your flesh or your bones?

Youâ€™re in the river, and youâ€™re in the storm

Youâ€™re mother nature drawn in human form

Different flowers from a single seed, but tell me whatâ€™s a rainbow without a bit of green?

Will you ride the surf or the storm? Will you cheer or hang your head and mourn?

And I would like to hope that what you choose will help us both

But you gotta prune your leaves if you ever want the sweet fruit to grow.

Just wanna stand up, before I gotta sit back down

Sometimes you just canâ€™t keep on going without gaining a little ground, and itâ€™s hard to sit here, feel the aching your knees.

The spine that longs to straighten, the tongue that yearns to sing

Will you trust the push or the pull? Will you trust your heart or your soul?
