The Kingdom

Bethany Dillon

It tapped me on the shoulder today when I got home
I saw everything collecting dust
It made me hope there was something more
So I pour over pages desperate to find out why
The cripple at your table has what I'm longing to findTeach me how to hum it
Because I don't know the words yetHelp me see the light, I'm reaching through the fight

Vahwah show me the Kingdom

Yahweh, show me the Kingdom

Arms open wide, death swallowed up by life

Yahweh, show me the KingdomWhy are some women barren while the wicked's house is full?

The stories never seem to end, give me evidence I'm not alone

You said the weak would be lifted up but maybe just not yet

So while I wait in this flesh and blood, I'll learn to lean inHelp me see the light, I'm reaching through the fight

Yahweh, show me the Kingdom

Arms open wide, death swallowed up by life

Yahweh, show me the KingdomHelp me see the light, I'm reaching through the fight

Yahweh, the Kingdom

Arms open wide, death swallowed up by life

Yahweh, show me the KingdomHelp me see the light, I'm reaching through the fight

Yahweh, show me the Kingdom

Arms open wide, death swallowed up by life

Yahweh, show me the KingdomThe Kingdom, the Kingdom, yeah

The Kingdom, the Kingdom
