

Watching Airplanes

Gary Allan

Sitting out here on the hood of this truck looking up
At a caramel colored sunset sky
Checking my watch, doing the math in my head
Counting back words to when you said goodbye
Well those runway lights are getting brighter I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes take off and fly
Trying to figure out which one you might be on
And why you don't love me anymore
Right now I'm sitting out here watching airplanes I would've lied, could've cried, should've tried harder
Done anything to make you stay
I wonder what you'd do if you looked out your window
You saw me running down the runway just like I was crazy
But that fence is too high, so am I So I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes take off and fly
Trying to figure out which one you might be on
And why you don't love me anymore Right now I know you're thirty thousand feet above me
But a million miles away, a million miles away
By now I know I outta act like you don't love me But I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes take off and fly
I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes take off and fly
Trying to figure out which one you might be on
And why you don't love me anymore Yeah, I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes go by, by, by
I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes, baby bye, bye, bye, bye, bye
Yeah, I'm just sitting out here watching airplanes
