

God Made Man

Young the Giant

You never know the weight of your crimes
But when all the gates have closed and you're tired
You stand a while by the fire
And it burns bright
A while, a while, you sit quiet
Inside you're so warm
Your eyes open up
To the sunrise
To the sunrise
Far from here
I never know the state that you're in
It's obvious you've climbed in your skin
But I know I will walk across
When it's silent inside, it feels right
Inside you're so warm
Your eyes open up
To the sunrise
To the sunrise
Cause I want you to know
That I don't
(God made man
And his reason)
Cause I want you to know
That I don't
(God made man
And his reason)
Cause I want you to know
That I don't
(God made man
And his reason)
Cause I want you to know
That I don't
