Song of Kaiaphas

Ancient

I slept in the fires of Hades
But did not burn
I breathed in sulphorous vapors
To reach the astral planeI tamed the three-headed Cerberus
Then devoured his flesh
I stared deep at the face of the Gorgon
And made her turn to stoneI made love to Prosperine
To taste its bitter venom
I shot an arrow into the eye of the Cyclops
The earth shook as he fellI called the mighty Kraken
And watched him rise to do my bidding
I soared on the wings of the great dragon
To feel the infernal windI hunted the enchanted unicorn
To obtain its horn of power
I entered the labyrinth of Daedalus
And slayed the ferocious MinotaurI came as the great star
To ignite the blaze of the Phoenix
I'll come to you in the shape of Incubus
And plant my deadly seed
