But a Moment

Peter, Paul & Mary

Memory moves us past each other
Time is a ribbon without an end
Love is the lesson we keep learning
Death but a moment we must spendLast week as I made our lunch
We talked of yesterdays
I remember more than you
That happens lots these daysBut how we laughed, I almost cried
And the afternoon flew by
As we sat on the patio, sipping our drinks
And the sunlight began to dieMemory moves us past each other
Time is a ribbon without an end
Love is the lesson we keep learning
Death but a moment we must spendAnd we try to give each other comfort
We try to hold off that dark night
Each of us careful for the other
Keeping our own fear out of sightAh, you know I've always loved you
And I know you've loved me too
So it's hard to watch you crumble
And forget all that you knewYesterday while I was driving
Sunlight streaming through the trees
Suddenly my heartache parted
And suddenly I felt at easeYou will love me all your life
As I will love you all of mine
That's the gift we give each other
That's the gift divineThough memory moves us past each other
Though time is a ribbon without an end
Love's still the lesson we keep learning
And death, but a moment we must spend

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/