Letting Go

Ben Sollee

It's a long, hard road
Through a rough edged land
To the softest part of a manAnd it's lined with stones
Tangled with regrets
That are just too hard to forgetThere's rusty signs
Overlooked on the way
To the heart of a troubled manAnd you can loose yourself
In the deep, muddy ruts
Worn through by the pride of a manBut, letting go... ?In a lonesome field
There's a wild-eyed mare
Tied to the weight of a manAnd she once ran free
With the wind in her hair
Breathing hard for the love of a manHe won't let her be
She won't let him rest
'Till he learns how to forgiveBut, letting go... ?Forgiveness is a falling leaf
In the changing of the years
As it settles down to the cooling groundLet it go
Let it go
Let it go
