

Lucky Enough

Scott Kirby

I ain't done nothin, and i ain't got much but this road weary smile on my face.

My doctor, my lawyer say you're no tom sawyer and you can't keep up keeping this pace.

As the shadows grow longer and the north wind blows stronger it's a struggle to sing out my part, you can't live your life with the luck of the Irish without knowing that life breaks your heart.

and if you're living to love by the ocean

loving to live by the sea and lucky enough to live on blue water

you're lucky enough by me

Cold winter wind it's a powerful foe it'll blow you away from your home.

You'll end up shipwrecked on some bony island with a dollar and an old book of poems.

And i knew a lady they say she's half crazy singing her songs in the dark.

You can't be a pauper or a poet or a painter without knowing that love breaks your heart.

And if you're living to love by the ocean

loving to live by the sea

And lucky enough to live on blue water

you're lucky enough by me

shore to shore salesman most all of my life sellin stories and songs by the case.

an old friend he said if you're not on the edge you're takin up way too much space and i've taken chances and suffered the glances of those fools with their feet on the land and i'll raise my glass you can kiss my old ass cause i'll die with my feet in the sand

|:And if you're living to love by the ocean and loving to live by the sea.

Lucky enough to live on blue water

you're lucky enough by me :|

Lyrics Submitted by Charles Gunter

Lyrics provided by <https://damnllyrics.com/>