Bloomfield Ave.

Catch 22

She falls fast asleep in her Glassboro apartment
Dreaming of what she wants to be
So she just organizes photographs
Taken in this year that's past
'Cause nothing more adores her memoriesDoes she miss any kiss that I placed upon her lips
Does she have a photograph of me at all?
That day she walked away, I turned my head
And didn't pay attention, said California is my final fallLast time I saw her, the first time that I saw her cry
She had a boyfriend and a tattoo of a butterfly
Biology, photography, ambition, was enough for her to leave me
I swore I'd find you on the other sideBloomfield Avenue, sick of pickin' through dumpster a meal
I hold a gun but I can't feel it to my head and hum a song
Say goodnight, it's all wrong, it's alright
I close my eyes and take a bite, bite, bite
Close my eyes and take a bite, bite, bite
Close my eyes and take a biteAnother thing I should've said
Light another cigarette, another thing I left behind
Another thing I should've said
Light another cigarette, another thing I left behind
Ashes to ashes we all fall downHomeless on the west, she's on the east
I only wish that I could see her one more time
To remind her that I love her and I shot him down
Now I'm in this crazy town againHitchhike my way across the states
I'm banging on the door, she's passed out on the floor
Sawed off shotgun by her side, no one heard her cry
My tears down the wood of our old neighborhoodI saw her through the window
But it didn't have the strength to knock it down, down, down
Didn't have the strength to knock it down, down, down
Didn't have the strength to knock it downAnother thing I should've said
Light another cigarette, another thing I left behind
Another thing I should've said
Light another cigarette, another thing I left behind
Ashes to ashes we all fall downAshes to ashes we all fall down
Ashes to ashes we all fall down
Ashes to ashes we all fall down
Ashes to ashes we all fall downWe all fall down
We all fall down
We all fall down
We all fall down

We all fall down
