Sunrise, Sunset

Alfred Molina, Randy Graff, and Company

I'll always have a sunrise I'll always have a sunset I'll always have the ocean to help deal with these emotions and there'll always be a highway that's running through the desert in southern californiabut all i really want is you all i really want is you (x3)you'll always have your sunrise you'll always have your sunset and i know you need some time alone even though it's selfish i pray to god you keep in mind this broken heart you left behind in southern californiabut all i really want is you all i really want is you (x3)there'll always be a hole in my heart that's shaped just like you and there'll always be an empty space in everything that i do but i'll always have this voice that i can sing until the day i die
in southern californiabut all i really want is you all i really want is you (x3)i'll always have a sunrise i'll always have a sunset
i'll always have this force that i can sing until the day i die in southern california
