Point of View

Fates Warning

Looking out on a familiar scene
There's no agreement in what we see
Your perception lacks clarity
And my perspective is blinding meSide by side
Divided they standParallel lives running parallel with you
To the point where our horizons divide
My opinion is just a point of view
And your position is the other sideCaught up in our convictions we forget
How our senses distort things we see
We can't accept our differences
But we can always disagreeSide by side
Divided they standParallel lives running parallel with you
To the point where our horizons divide
My opinion is just a point of view
And your position is the other sideWhere I stand is not so far from you
A different opinion is just another point of viewParallel lives running parallel with you
To the point where our horizons divide
My opinion is just a point of view
And your position is the other sideParallel lives running parallel with you
To the point where our horizons divide
My opinion is just a point of view
And your position is the other sideParallel lives running parallel with you
To the point where our horizons divide
My opinion is just a point of view
