

Before You

Cheyenne Jackson

What used to be the best in me
Now makes a bloody mess in me
I had no direction home.
But you're so new and bright to me,
There's no more cold and night to me
I used to fall down on my own I was lost in my head
Trying to forget Before you, I never really had a chance
Before you, I never had a reason to dance
You broke apart the walls in me,
You held my hand and made me see.
I never want to go back to,
Before you. There was a time before, you see,
When all I cared about was me,
So oblivious to everything.
You said there had to be a way,
For me to find a sunny day
And now you make me wanna sing I was lost in my head
Trying to forget Before you, I never really had a chance
Before you, I never had a reason to dance
You broke apart the walls in me,
You held my hand and made me see.
I never want to go back to,
Before you. What used to feel rehearsed in me,
Now feels like it will burst in me.
Everything I cursed in me,
Has disappeared and set me free Before you, I never really had a chance
La, la, la
Before you, I never had a reason to dance
But, You broke apart the walls in me,
You held my hand and made me see.
I never want to go back to,
Before you.
Before you.
You broke apart the walls in me,
You held my hand and made me see.
I never want to go back to,
Before you.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>