

I Can't Hold Your Memory

Scott Dawson

I've developed a new habit
Since we parted ways
To occupy my sleepless nights
And my agonizing days
I close my eyes imagining
You smiling back at me
Then suddenly we're back in time
The way we used to be
We talk about our future
We laugh about our past
Sometimes we sit in silence
Romantic glances cast
Convinced I'm in the moment
My heartache dissipates
But when I reach for you reality
It slaps me in the face

Cause I can't hold your memory
I can't squeeze it tightly
And pull it close to me
Even though it fills my mind
My arms remain empty
Cause I can't hold your memory

It's funny how I'm able
Just for a short while
To believe you came back home
And asked to reconcile
But I can fool myself
Only for so long
Till this burning need to touch you
Finally grows too strong
