My Conscience

Structures

Let's hear it for regret.
It sticks in my mind like a secret, and it's caused so much pain.
So let me explain why I've been drinking my conscience under the table.
Swimming with scapegoats, I'm clearly unstable.
There's nothing for me.
So I will carry the weight of all my past mistakes until I'm blue in the fucking face.
It started storming when I left the heart that I was warming.
It never just rains, it's always pouring.
So listen up, Ive too much pride to lay down and die but I never got a chance to say goodbye.
Let's hear it for regret.
It sticks in my mind like a secret, and it's causes so much pain.
So let me explain why I've been drinking my conscience under the table.
I'm clearly unstable.
Carry the weight of your past mistakes.
Until you blue in the face from every step that you take.
Tear me apart.
This guilt is so frustrating.
Tear me apart.
Rewind to the start and tear me apart.
I wish I could say goodbye.
I never got a chance to say goodbye.
So when you feel like you've losing in the long run. I'll be standing right beside you with a shotgun.
Boom.
I will never come to terms with leaving, so take me home. I've got too much pride to lay down and die.
We've been failing, every breath that we take.
We've been failing, every breath that we take.
Tear me apart.
This guilt is so frustrating.
Tear me apart.
Rewind to the start and tear me apart.
I wish I could say goodbye.
Pray for the shores.
The tides are changing, the waters are raising too high for my head to keep above.
The difference was... I still made it out.
My conscience has some questions to ask (so call back)
They've been piling since the day that you left (so come back)
I've got a couple questions to ask but there's no one (no one) to answer me back.
I've got a couple questions to ask (so come back)
My conscience has some questions to ask (so call back)
