Hot Hot Heat

Happiness is limited but misery has no end
Give us somewhere we can go instead of one more dead end
The subway doors, they opened up, we ran as though we had to Laugh like there was one last chance to do what lovers might do With my heart out on parade you got up and walked away
A day can be a thousand years, or seconds under her shade
What the heart wants all depends on what she wore out that day
Impressing them impresses her, but only for a minuted
Making this more than one day seemed almost realistic
With my heart out on parade you got up and walked away
Ripped it down and tore it up
It doesn't seem to bother her at all now I'm gone forever
Yeah it's over now
It's over now
It's over now
It's over now
It's over now
It's over now
Happiness is limited but misery has no end
Give us somewhere we can go instead of one more dead end
