Less Than Nothing

Choke

remember we'd confide without a second guess the feeling now a loss or maybe less emptiness a feeling self regret something i will never ever forget the faces you have stepped on have been broken down understand your motivation guilt lies on knowing you were desecrating friendships gone you threw it all away something you should have known we both were wrong was left unsaid and it weights on me it's just like you to be setting for less than nothing you're making assumptions my views mean nothing to you remain half a step away without mending the trust that has been torn apart misunderstanding has left this all for naught swallow your pride and let's slavage what we both knew take down your guard it will be dismissed
