

Black Light Doves

The Nautics

A soft luminescent glow lit your pretty face from the enter sign
I didn't really know what to expect until you told the girls you were mine
Felt you slide underneath my coat as we were walking through that line
It was one of those cold winter nights the kind you catch once in your life
Baby would you make me the happiest man as the Ferris wheel broke down Sitting at the top we slowly digressed laughing at the people buzzing around
I didn't catch an answer from you then and two years later woke up in a different town
I had her I saw her I loved her I need her but where is she now
Woke up in the middle of the night and scurried across a cold wood floor
Walking down the hall caressing the wall trying to find the grip of the bedroom door
I splashed some water in my face and upon my disgrace my reflection wore a frown
I had her I saw her I loved her I need her but where is she now
