

The Killer Was A Coward

Dermot Kennedy

See the killer was a coward
Dark deeds in dark towers
So he fled when they came
Blowin' brass, carrying chains

They wanna lock him in the dark
They wanna kill what's in his heart
But they left the town to hunt him down
They left one man to hold it down
But when they get back he's in the throne
Looks like the killers fucking clone
Says he's got ideas of his own
But there's one thing he killed to know
See there's a hero in the crowd
And his heart starts beating loud
Says the killer took his friend
And decides that this is where it ends

So the night the kings walk in the tower
His eyes lit up with all the power
And the hero is ghosting by the guards
And his heart is carrying a charge
He stabs him in his cunning heart
The scream tore sea and sky apart
So you want fears? We still got several
At least the killer's dancing with the devil

And the hero did it
For days when you don't know if the moon will ever come, let it
Blaze down and I'm telling you man it's sweet when it does and when I Think of you I think of spirit defined
I think of all the love that we shared at a very dark time

So the hero did it for the summer
For long days with that sun in your hair
For fires and family
For the phrase "Don't ever leave me"

The sorrow won't be finding me no more! (x3)

When youre coming home now

The sorrow won't be finding me no more! (x3)

When youre coming home now»¿

Lyrics Submitted by Mortem

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnlyrics.com/>