

The Mind's Eye

October Project

Today i woke
Hidden from the sun
I heard a young man speaking,
Magic on his tongue
Bound at the feet
Taken by the wrist
He reaches out to me, a diamond in his fist
I hear my name
Repeating like a prayer
Within the chambers of the early morning air
You speak of love
So innocent and clear
Invent an emptiness where i can disappear
And time goes away
Where no one can see
But in the mind's eye
The summer never ends
The days go on and on
Until you sleep again
The strangers kissed
The lovers could not part
They could not see the ending
Coming from the start
There were no signs
No changes in the air
If there were better times, i can't imagine where
But in the mind's eye
The summer never ends
The days go on and on
Until you sleep again
And time goes away
Where no one can see
Today i woke
His name upon my tongue
I saw the birds above me leaving one by one
A promise held too tightly
Always comes apart
Within the verses and reverses of the heart
But in the mind's eye

The summer never ends

The days go on and on

Until you sleep again

And time goes away
