

Maybe Not

Barenaked Ladies

Pretty soon, you will be wanting me to go
And I will only be the enemy, you know
Pretty soon, you will be needing me to leave
But know that you and I will always be naive Maybe you'll forgive the things that I forgot
Maybe you're forgetting all the times we've fought
Maybe we should divvy up the things we bought
But maybe not Why don't we lay down on the kitchen floor
All that we say we had with us before?
We find a way to what we're looking for
By separating what is mine from yours Pretty soon I'll be the one you hold at bay
And then forever I'll be good as gold lam
I know your heart cannot be bought or sold for much
Donder maar, consider yourself told in Dutch And we can argue til our throats are sore
About how far you take a metaphor
You always need to see the glass half filled
And now it seems to me the half glass spilled Maybe you'll forgive the things that I forgot
Maybe you're forgetting all the times we've fought
Maybe we should divvy up the things we bought
But maybe Maybe you'll forgive the things that I forgot
Maybe you're forgetting all the times we've fought
Maybe we should divvy up the things we bought
But maybe not Maybe not
Maybe not
But maybe not
