Until the Morning Comes

Milow

your clothes spread out on the floor just like it was before a homerun is a hit I'll never score the hours before the break of dawn are as fragile as a song and can go on and on and on and on and on

we wait for the light to break through the summer night I hope I run into you tomorrow and I hope you will talk to me until the morning comes until the morning comes looking for my clothes on the floor I gently close the door in times like these you're all I'm looking for and I swear to God I know that I want to struggle to get by the fact that all the good things someday die because all the good things someday die

we wait for the light
to break through the summer night
I hope I run into you tomorrow
and I hope you will talk to me until
the morning comes until the morning comes the morning comes until morning comes the morning comes..

the morning comes..

we wait for the light
to break through the summer night
I hope I run into you tomorrow
and I hope you will talk to me until
the morning comes until the morning comes

the morning comes until the morning comes
until the morning comes..

Lyrics submitted by Anita.

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/