

Medicine

Two Ton Shoe

This disease has wracked by body
since the day that we first met.
I reel in delirium.

It's not metaphor for love
when my pillow's soaked with sweat.
I wait for you to come and release me.
Take it away.
It's the pain you can't imagine.

Let me have some of your medicine.
Let me have some of that serum that is coursing through your veins.
Let me have some of your medicine.
Give me something cool to fight this fever raging in my brain.
Or I will never be the same.

(Never be the same)

Well I'm incapacitated
while you're out there flying high,
immune to all infections.

Share some of the antidote
while it's still in supply.
Don't leave me hanging too long
for you to come,
and take it away.
This patient's wearing thin.

Let me have some of your medicine.
Let me have some of that serum that is coursing through your veins.
Let me have some of your medicine.
Give me something cool to fight this fever raging in my brain.
Or I will never be the same.

(Never be the same)
