

Why Dream

Matt Corby

You're drinking, you're worn out
You're way too good at getting what you want
And I want, foremost, to unleash you
Just for diamonds on your coffin
I know it's wrong, but I want it
Just to be like you, though you talk too much to listen
And I want you to know
And we're meant to be grown-ups
And I fuck you wrongly and blame it on the change of heart
Oh, oh, oh
Why dream at all tonight if you're keeping all the fear inside
Look into the bright screen that shows you all the places you dream to be
So, just open up your eyes and celebrate how high we get to be
No lies, and no hate
Finally, you owe it to yourself
I race home, 'cause I can't await to lay with you
But I won't bother you, if you wanna
So give it back to me way too honest
We're dividing everything among the few
And I judge you wrongly and blame it on the change of heart
Oh, oh, oh
Why dream at all tonight if you're keeping all the fear inside
Look into the bright screen that shows you all the places you dream to be
So, just open up your eyes and celebrate how high we get to be
No lies, and no hate
Finally, you owe it to yourself
Why dream at all tonight
If you're keeping all the fear inside
If you're keeping all the fear inside
