innocent

moonlight awakening

[Vlastyn]Is it too late to remember those innocent days?
You harbour resentment, I know You remember only the things I've taken away
I'm silenced by grief and crying below this haze...I've been so selfish, been such a fool,
I always knew I'd never really get inside of youIs it too late to hope now everything's changed?
We've traded places yet it's never the same
They sought the illusion that I shed
To become the one thing that they dreadThey're all discouraged catastrophes and I'll never grant them any of my sympathyIf only we learned to forget...
Instead we're taught to regret...It was always my thought if we learned to forget we'd be innocent again
The way we must think, the way we must choose, the way we must always pretend
It was always my thought if we learned to forget we'd be innocent again Because who can argue what's right or wrong when it all comes down to the end?If only we'd learned to forget...
We'd never know such regret...

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/