Ill Minded

Beanbag

Immerse me in science, this cursedness is blessed
When all of life is tested, the research benefits
I'm taking anti-matter, I hammer in my brain
That evolutions, revolution, and all of man are sameThis hunger is inside me, my stomach is in pain
But all the answers in my world could never take away
And how I love you science, I seek for you in vain
And now I'm feeling empty, but I'm begging you to stay'Cause I, I thought that you, you would always come
You would always comfort me
But you, you are just human, you are full of sin
So put your trust above and not in manYou took home this violence, it was how you learnt love
Don't take it to heart but I'm finding living tough
I needed you then, and how I need you now
But every time I tell you it just doesn't come out rightI don't like this silence, why can't I explain?
I never wanted this, but you ignore me anyway
And how I'm eating torment, it staggers in my brain
Now I'm feeling empty and I'm begging you to say'Cause I, I thought that you, you would always come
You would always comfort me
But you, you are just human, you are full of sin
So put your trust above and not in manI thought that you, you would always come
You would always comfort me
But you, you are just human, you are full of sin
So put your trust above and not in manSilence, I want you
Silence, I want you
Silence, I want you
Silence, I want youSilence, I want you
Silence, I want you
And, I want you
