

The Last Song

Thousand Foot Krutch

And you can throw away your expectations now
And all the things you wouldn't say out loud
There's nothing left to pick apart now
The cards are all down
And now you know the sound of my heart
When it hits the paper
There's no more mystery here
This is the last song

I remember when we first became a band
We'd drive all night and talk about the world
I remember when we used to now and then
Just sit and wonder where it all would go
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song
And you can throw away your expectations now
And all the things you wouldn't say out loud
There's nothing left to pick apart now
The cards are all down
And now you know the sound of my heart
When it hits the paper
There's no more mystery here
This is the last song

I remember when we first became a band
We'd set up in the bedroom, practice all night long
I remember when we used to now and then
Keep the neighborhood up from the sound of our guitars
I remember when we'd all hop in the van
Turn the radio on, we were off to see the world
Wake up at ten to do it all again
Till the sun goes down 'cause this is all we know
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song
I remember when we first became a band
We'd drive all night and talk about the world
I remember when we used to now and then

Just sit and wonder where it all would go
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song
This is the last song, the last song
So everybody sing along, this is the last song

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnllyrics.com/>