

All Those Days Are Gone

Jump, Little Children

All those days are gone
So she falls asleep every night just before dawn
And closes her eyes as the sun starts to rise
And all of those days are goneSometimes she pretends
The sun [Incomprehensible] has finally begun
To come to an end
Luminous nights of lonely streetlights
Sometimes she likes to pretendShe says that everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else aroundPulls down all the shades
Try to forget how all of the memories fade
Memories that bled
Curtain bright red, time to pull down the shadesShe said that everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else aroundAll those days are gone
As far as the stars are away from the midday sun
Memories so bright in a spinning twilight
But all those days are goneShe says that everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else aroundI'll trade the moon for the sun
But this feeling for no oneShe said that everybody wants to be here
Well, everybody wants to be here
Well, everybody wants to be hereAll those days are gone
As far as the stars are away
From the mid-day sun
