

A Final Farewell

Morgana Lefay

[The Chief Magistrate - Father & Daughter] Hangman's dais

Not far from the crossfire stake
She stands there concealed with her cloak
Remembering her father's last words;
"Goodnight my precious
Flee from this town while you can"
Her sense fills with anger and sorrow
Her tears make her freeze in the chill

...So alone

Leave her father alone

...So alone

God, leave him alone

Towards the fire

She looks at his eyes with despair
His body is weak, and he's bleeding
From wounds made by iron and chains

...So alone

Leave her father alone

...So alone

God, leave him alone A final goodbye

A silent farewell from his eyes

He's laughing and gives her a grin
Through the madness, he still understand...

...That it's her

Remembering her eyes

...It is her

Through the madness he cries

...So alone

She's walking away

...So alone

But he will be reborn

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>