

Vampire, Hold Me Tight

The Mighty Stef

I knew we'd dream the world a better place, and in the blackened windows, I'd pray the sunlight shine. You save your sorrows for a thousand days, now on my darkened doorstep there stands no friend of mine. Each bite I take it brings me closer to death and in an age of nothing I wish for something still.
This world, the bible, pills and smiley faces, the Lord calls shotgun you must do his crooked will. Vampire, hold me tight.
Let the spirit of your sadness growl a howl into the night,
vampire, hold me tight,
may your mystifying madness be my guiding light.
(mystifying madness) Well it's not hard to say but it's so hard to do the vampire chases me but I will see her through. And on your templed night when nothing seemed quite right you took that sacred right and ran towards the light. And in the blackened blues by the silver reed beneath the golden sun you were the saddest one.
