The Flatliners

The sun shows no mercy this morning
I'm staring thin-eyed as the rolling ground comes to a halt
A heart once close has stopped beating
But its memory lives forever
And your blurry eyes will make some sense of thisYou will always be remembered
You will be celebrated
You will never be forgotten
These tears still haven't fadedI feel I'm awake today with this memory that was once misplaced
And I never thought I'd live to see this over-pouring sadness
Our eyes wide, receptive
A family without a face learns that hands around them will help give direction and our mourning hearts will skip a beat at every single mention
You will not be forgotten
And we will singYou're not lost, you're not lost
You're watching over us
You're not lost, you're not lost
Oh just listen to these words we're screaming out
Oh god, it's gotten so loud now
You're not lost, you're not lost
