For You

David Ryan Harris

Saturday before the sun is up
I'm out the door and on my way, I
Catch the two and then the thirty-five
And by six-fifteen I'm on the trainThrity miles 'til the final stop
And still I have to walk a few more
By the time I finally reach your garden's gate
I have nineteen steps 'til I'm at your doorAnd oh what a thrill
To finally be with you
And when I see your face I know thatThere ain't nothing strong enough to keep me away from you
There could be a wall of fire ten feet or higher
I would just walk on through
Where there once was only room for one
Forever there will be twoThat's why I travel all this wayFor you
To you
For youOoooohSunday night and I'm at home alone
And I miss the smell of your perfume
Five longs days and four more hours
'Til I am there again with youAnd oh what a thrill
To finally be with you
And when I see your face
I knowThere ain't nothing strong enough to keep me away from you
There could be a wall of fire ten feet or higher
I would just walk on through
Where there once was only room for one
Forever there will be twoThat's why I travel all this way for youSeconds make mintues
Make hours make days
I've added it all up a million ways
Multiply that times the fact that when I'm with you
I feel brand newThat's why I travel all this way to youThere ain't nothing strong enough to keep me away from you
There could be a wall of fire ten feet or higher
I would walk on through
Where there once was only room for one
Forever there will be twoThat's why I travel this way
Just to see your pretty face
Each and every Saturday for youFor you
To you
For you
