

Every Inch a Woman

Julie Feeney

Katherine is so fine
All the glorious time
Irrefutably, she was blessed
Her intricate designs
She surpassed showing signs
She'd wander north, south, east, and west

She was every inch a woman
Who reveled in every pictorial mind
She was every inch a woman
With numerous various riches inside

By a fast country mile
She excelled time and tide
Word began to spread with tales of her splendiferous merit
She was every inch a woman
A sparkling, magnificent, luminous gem
She was every inch a woman
Spell-binding and blossoming, shinning within

Katherine is so fine, at this glorious time
In Glasgow she chanced upon Sally
And Sally was sweet, and Sally was chic
Devotees around her were many

A small envy began
In the luminous gem
So small Katherine could quell it
And day after day, she wished he'd obey
She discovered she couldn't allay it

She was every inch a woman
But darkness was growing and growing within
She was every inch a woman
But, oh, the great blackness so quickly set in

Katherine is so fine all that beautiful mind
No intricate designs were appearing
And her twind in her mind was a scourge of her bind

An envy that made her so weary

Katherine, so fine, all that beautiful mind
Her intricate designs had waned over time

She was every inch a woman
But darkness kept growing and growing within

She was every inch a woman
No longer a sparkling, magnificent -

Every inch a woman
Darkness had grown and grown within

She was every inch a woman
No longer a sparkling, magnificent gem
