What Happens Tomorrow

Melissa Etheridge

I believe that if I work hard enough
I will see that there can be enough
And I believe I can think clear enough
To conceive a place where there's enough
If not now, when? If not today, then?
What about tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
I believe a woman can work hard and succeed
And we could be content to believe
That she could be in charge of the free
And be the president
If not now, when? If not today, then?
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
If you become the change, you want to see you change
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
I believe that we're all waking up from a spell
That those that profit from the fear cast so well
And good people of the Earth now can tell
There is no us and them
If not now, when? If not today, then?
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
If you become the change, you want to see you change
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
All this love, all this choice, everyone, every voice
All of life that you see all are possibilities
[Incomprehensible] sow the love, to ever sense into the soul
And this is truth, I believe, I believe, I believe
And truth is of the people, by the people, for the people
Truth is of the people, by the people, for the people
Truth is of the people, by the people, for the people
Truth is of the people, by the people, for the people
If not now, when? If not today, then?
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
If you become the change, you want to see you change
What happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
I believe, I believe, if not now, if not now, if not now, when?
What happens tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow?
Oh what happens tomorrow? What happens tomorrow?
Oh what happens tomorrow? I believe, I believe, I believe, I believe
