Hemp

Living Colour

How carefully I've shaped you in the solitude of days

How peaceful is my mind entwined in cord around my fingers

How sweet the days I've marked in knots I've tenderly caressed

So many times I've touched you, reached you, teased youNow fingering these veins of hemp, their hair upon my skin

And how gently, quickly you will sleep
Slip into my collection with it's bristles, coils, intentions
Yet your words will be unfaithful before I set you freeSlip as life is bound to slip from this entropy disorder
Then tied and laid upon the floor in perfect symmetry

'Til the frayed edge of your lips on mine
Positioned, placed at ease once more
'Til this restlessness returns, I turn and turn again
