

Bright Stars

Kurt Hunter

I saw an angel through a doorway
She told me of her name
And though the syllables were hard to swallow
I spoke it just the same
 In a dream
 In a dream

I saw a canon in a courtyard
It sat smoking like a liar
Though it held onto rainwater
Its purpose was for fire
 In a war
 In a war

Bright stars fade away
Bright stars fade away
 Fade away

I lost a lover from the distance
 Painfully bloodless
Now we speak as if strangers
And fault ourselves for darkness
 In the night
 In the night

Bright stars fade away
Bright stars fade away
