Old Photographs

Jim Capaldi

Yesterday I felt the wind blowing around my shoulder
Feel like I'm getting older
Still I can't forget your faceSeparated by a million miles of ocean
My heart still feels emotion
Even in this lonely placeOld photographs and places I remember
Just like a dying ember
That's burned into my soul
Even though we walk the diamond studded highways
It's the country lanes and byways
That makes us long for homeLately I just find my mind has turned to dreaming
Making plans and scheming
How I'm gonna get back homeBut deep down inside I know its really hopeless
This road I'm on is endless
We climb our mountains all aloneOld photographs and places I remember
Just like a dying ember
That's burned into my soul
Even though we walk the diamond studded highways
It's the country lanes and byways
That makes us long for homeOld photographs and places I remember
Just like a dying ember
That's burned into my soul
Even though we walk the diamond studded highways
It's the country lanes and byways
That makes us long for home
