Repairable

A Sound Mind

We've walked through this hallway and we've stepped through each archway We're turning the key now Is it to what we once had or still have

'Cause even now with so much gone
there's still so much left
The scars and the wounds only run skin deep they're repairable

But you and I we run deeper that bone we run deep into the soul and that's not changeable

'Cause even now with so much gone
The scars and the wounds only run skin deep
They're repairable
But you and I we run deeper than bone
deep into the soul
And that's not changeable

You say that to live life without risk is to risk living And that anything less that complete and utter passion
Is a complete waste of your time
Well I show you and you show me I grow you, you grow me its worth keeping I love you, you love me
I heal you, you heal me, its worth fixing 'Cause I say a life without you is a life hardly worth living

'Cause even now with so much gone
The scars and the wounds only run skin deep
They're repairable

deep into the soul
And that's not changeable

I see you see in me
What I see in myself
You see I see in you
What you see in yourself
But the question is Do you see in us what I see in ourselves?
Do you see in us what I see in ourselves?
