

Sail Upon Your Shore

Frankie Chavez

Long is the night as the day shuts the door I am lying here alone together with an empty chord Drifting apart with no one to lead our way in the sea of broken dreams on a raft made of clay I look at you and I see all the times we left behind have become fading memories clearly out of reach And it hurts me to think that another day has passed and the place where I stand is closing to an end Give me a reason why
I should sail upon your shore
Give me a reason why I should sail upon your shore
Like the sun and the moon we never ever crossed our ways sometimes it's hard to find yourself when the flame fades away Riding alone with no one to lead my way how can I find the bed where once I used to lay my head Give me a reason why
I should sail upon your shore
Give me a reason why I should sail upon your shore
Give me a reason why
I should sail upon your shore
Give me a reason why I should sail upon your shore
