We've Never Been Equal

Warship

We've spent the hours in anticipation
Hand down the sentence, your sulking frame still haunts the entrance
We envy your power, we pray for good fortune
Only to argue over who got the bigger portion
All I see is amplified in song
We cannot win, nobody wins
Trying to decipher right from wrong
With more accessories I'll have more confidence
Playful rebellion made another target audience
We find it so easy to live with war
When there is hostility kicking down the door
All I see is amplified in song
Nobody wins, we can't win
Trying to decipher right from wrong
With every end something new begins
All of this could soon be gone
The line gets blurred between good and evil
A handful of "haves" getting rich off the blood of the people
Oh no, we've never been equal
Maybe you'll feel moved to speak
When a tank rolls down your street
What would you say?
