

Bluebird

Bluebird

Bluebird on a telephone line
How are you? I'm feeling fine
Sweetly do I whisper your name
Lonely solo taxi ride to a cheap motel
On the wrong side of the tracks
The facts are tricky to explain
Cold front bearing down
Blowing in from Birmingham
By dawn the window's wet with icy rain
Behind fourteen doors
A sad parade of paramours are throwing little White rocks at sorrow's window pane
Me, I've found someone to love more than the rain
 Salvation Army ringing bell
 Kingdom come and wishing wells
 Hey Santa Claus I see your junkie eyes
It's the devil and the deep blue sea with old friends
 I hope I never see again all tangled up
 With misery and lies
 The lonely hiss of passing cars
 Feeds the ache of ancient scars
Like ghosts beneath my bed rattling chains
 No good luck charm or remedy ever
 Proved to soothe my sanity
 Nor bad medicine served to ease my pain
Had to find someone to love more than the rain
 Now, old habits will die hard
 This pile of junk setting in my yard
 Souvenirs from the wrecking ball of dreams
 You spend a lifetime tearing temples
 Down, it gets to feel like
 Hallowed ground is a shallow grave
 Where ne'er the bluebird sings
 Last time home when I played this song
 You said, "Dad, it's sad, and way too long"
And I pulled you close and held you in my arms
 Yes, salvation wears a thin disguise
 'Cause I can see the heaven in your eyes
 And I thank God them years

I searched were not in vain
Finally found someone to love more than the rain
Bluebird, I love you more than the rain
