

Straight to You Boy

Martin Newell

She's a jewel for your crown, you know,
She's a perfumes stairwell, a peal of laughter.
When she comes to your room, you know,
there's a spotlight on her, from your rafter.

And she knows where to go
When she's tired or alone.
It's straight to you boy.
It's straight to you

On a hot summer night, you know,
she's a reckless engine, sparking madly.
For the stars in the sky, you know,
As the haunted ocean calls you sadly

And she knows where to go
When she's tired or alone.
It's straight to you boy.
It's straight to you

And she knows where to go
When she's tired or alone.
It's straight to you boy.
It's straight to you

And she she knows
And she knows
It's straight to you boy.
It's straight to you.

And she she knows
And she knows
It's straight to you boy.
Straight to you.

And she she knows
And she knows
It's straight to you boy.
Straight to you.

And she she knows
And she knows
It's straight to you boy.
Straight to you.
