

Night Walker

Ray Bonneville

Here you come night walker as I spy you below your chin into your collar under my window
I've come to know your footsteps echoing as they fall and your street lamp silhouette following on the wallNight walker
night walker
where you going like that When the city night grows calmer you can hear every sound to who are you talking there's nobody else around could it be we are much alike you out there me in here each with our own kind of rusting hope and fearnight walker
where you going like thatI will think of you night walker when the dawn begins to show when the long night is over Where then will you go and what will you dream of when you finally close your eyes will I see you tomorrow at the usual time
where you going like thatNight walker
night walker
