

Little Nowhere Towns

The Tallest Man on Earth

"So this is what I can believe" is what I said to my friend I can recall
I must have been pretty gone when I went through these towns like a cannon ball
And I've already grown up here, here I might as well grow down
No it's shaky building fury, think this wind's going to settle down
Carolina, why are we going with this around It's so silvery to hear it's the light of little nowhere towns But the treasure we had was so big and we sunk through the earth and believe how slow
And the sun wasn't out for a week and the weekend you said there's just none to show
And I barely can remember little feet on solid ground
And the drinking part is useless when you bury away from sounds
Carolina where are you ending up this time
Say it's silvery to hear like the light of little nowhere towns Well so honestly I'm broken down by this emptiness
I feel
First you moan it then you yell it now we don't answer across the street
And I'm racing through my pocket's now cause I'm starting to believe Selling emptiness to strangers a little bit warmer than my dreams "Oh this is what I should believe" is what I said to my friend I can recall
I must have been pretty cold when I went through this house like a cannon ball
And I barely can remember asking you through all this time it's so shaky building fury like this wind's going to settle down
Carolina, where are we going to be found Here all silvery dear little light of little nowhere towns
