

Where Will You Be

Chely Wright

Where will you be when it hits you
Will you be driving your car
Will you be there in your office
With them all watching you fall apart Will it be next week or twelve months
When regret starts to dampen your skin
Cause you turn away love
That you had once
And might never have again Will you be able to call me
Or did you burn down that bridge to my door
Did you leave it with any compassion
Or a clean break that you're famous for
Do you even suspect that it's coming
That the storm is just gathering strength
Where will you be when it hits you
When you see what a mess you have made
Where will you be when I let go
When I finally get over that hill Will you be laughing
And drinking and smiling
When you suddenly get an odd chill
Will you chalk it up to the North wind
That a shiver just went up your spine
Will you realise right then what just happened
That whatever I felt for you died Will you be able to call me
Or did you burn down that bridge to my door
Did you leave it with any compassion
Or a clean break that you were famous for
Do you even suspect that it's coming
That the storm is just gathering strength
Where will you be when it hits you
When you see what a mess you have made Where will you be when it hits you
Will you be driving your car
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>